

Self-Reflections (15/15)

My personal favorite Tuesday was the thirteenth Tuesday when they talked about the Perfect day. This was my favorite because it shows that your perfect day doesn't have to be some big, fancy thing like going to a resort or some paradise island. Anybody can find perfection in an average day, but it takes a lot to dig down deep and find it. I think that everybody should be able to find perfection in an average day. I don't know if I could find my perfect day being so average, but maybe one day I will.

2. I think that throughout the days of this unit I became better at asking questions. I wasn't a complete pro, but I did my best to include others and ask things such as what or why. Everybody was a little shy about asking each other things and I think it takes courage to stand up and take the lead and ask things. I didn't improve that much but I did a little.

3. I participated for the most part. Some days I did good and other days not so much. I did my best to participate but some times I just didn't feel like it or I was too shy. Over the course of the unit I got better and improved but I still could have done a lot better. I think I still was one of the most interactive people in the group, but I could've talked more.
